- From the Library: This book is by Rowan Williams, the former Archbishop of Canterbury. It is Ponder these things : Praying with the Icons of the Virgin. He stresses that, in the Orthodox Church, the icon is not merely a piece of decoration or a visual aid, the icon is part of the act of worship; its context is invocation and doxology. There is a reality of the icon, which is a picture of some bit of this world, so depicted and so constructed as to open the world to the 'energy' of God at work in what is being shown. Mary stands on the frontier between earth and heaven. In this book are a number of depictions of her, and Williams interprets them. This is not only a book to be read but is an experience of how Mary and Jesus lead us into prayer. In this book there are pictures of the style of icon with an interpretation of what they depict.
